A group of teenage ISIS jihadists have killed dozens of Iraqi Christians in a church bombing in Mosul, media reports say, as the jihadist group continues to carry out bloody attacks on minorities. The attack on the Mosul church, which left around 40 people dead, came hours after the group said it had killed 36 Iraqi army soldiers and destroyed several military vehicles, according to several media reports, which also said that a government official told AFP that "as many as 70" people were killed and 200 wounded in the latest attacks in Iraq. The dead included the Rev. Paolo Dall'Oglio, whose body was found among the wreckage of the church, the Associated Press reported, citing the Rev. Silas Sakkus, the priest of the church. It said dozens of people were rescued from the rubble of the Mosul church. Iraqi military officials confirmed the attack on the church, but said they had no immediate details of casualties. Iraqi President Jalal Talabani issued a statement condemning the attacks, saying, "The Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant have committed a horrendous attack on a Christian church in Mosul," adding that the group had targeted "religious and tribal leaders, as well as worshippers." The US state department also condemned the attacks on the Christian community in Iraq. "This is just the latest in a string of attacks on innocent Iraqis," the statement said, adding, "On behalf of the United States government, we offer our deepest condolences to the families of those killed and injured. And we stand with the Iraqi government in its efforts to protect all of its citizens." In addition, the UK government issued a statement saying that it condemned the attacks "in the strongest possible terms." The latest wave of violence comes as the Islamic State group has launched a campaign to establish an Islamic caliphate, under the name of "the Islamic State" and also known as ISIS, in areas it has captured in Iraq and Syria. But the group's reign of terror is not limited to Iraq. In Nigeria, the group is thought to be behind a spate of attacks in the northern state of Kad 82157476af
